

TASTE TEST

Seabreeze culinary student Lea Gray looks on as DSC chefs test her dish in a competition among her peers. She was one of four selected for the prestigious Hot Food Team.

SEE PAGE 16

accuracy. Though a Trader Joe's rep could not be reached for comment, city of Ormond Beach Economic Development Director Joe Mannarino said it wasn't happening.

"The building's owner is still negotiating with a tenant," Mannarino said. "It's not Trader Joe's as far as I know."

The person who put up the sign, which was apparently an April Fool's Day joke, remains anonymous.

Man on a mission

Ormond man has passion for aiding the mentally ill.

WAYNE GRANT
NEWS EDITOR

Lamar "Sammy" Donaldson, of Ormond-by-the-Sea, said it's sad to walk down a passageway in the county jail and see so many mentally ill inmates.

"That's where they often end up," he said.

Donaldson, a social worker at Stewart-Marchman-Act Behavioral Healthcare, said that's why his passion is to keep them in their homes and out of crisis centers and jails.

His work was recognized recently. He was named Volusia/Flagler's Social Worker of the Year by the Journal of the National